ENGAGEMENT case studies

1. You run a mental health charity. You understand that there is a large Thai community living in the area, but you have never met any of them.
2. You run an after school football club next to the local secondary school. You've seen students who look Asian walking home past your playing fields, but none of your current participants know any of them, although someone suggested that one of the Asian students might be in his maths class.
3. As the chair of your village hall committee, you wonder why no disabled people use the hall, even though you have a new disabled toilet facility.
4. You run a playgroup which is well attended by all sections of the community, but has no gay parents attending.
