

Disabled people are hard to work with.

Homosexual people are just the same as everyone else and don't need special protection.

People from other countries should learn to speak English properly.

Mental health is a choice.

Old people are confused, anyway, so it's hard to tell if they are mentally ill.

People with mental health problems are egomaniacs.

Mental health support should be free to everyone.

Mental health workers should have a good working knowledge of all religions.

If a client doesn't want to work with a gay case worker, it's their choice.

A gay black mental health service user is first and foremost a mental health service user.

Cultural norms could be misperceived as mental health problems.

Mental illness is inevitable given our socio-political system.

The needs of the charity to work within its resources is more important than the needs of different clients.

We have more lessons to learn from people with mental illness than we have to teach them.